more a verb to the man with the bright red car He

He still lives at his mother's house he grew up there alone
 His brothers were considered slow so they were farmed out to homes
 He holds inside the loss he works now as a crossing guard
 And I would say he's just a guy the kind that you might pass right by
 And no one ever glorified the man with the bright red car

He thought about his family he knew it was not right
 So he hatched a plan he learned to drive he never told me why
 He drove out to the sanitarium and took his brothers home with him
 In the red car they were belted in goofy faces all a grin
 But the biggest grin on all that kin was on the man with the bright red car

He says it's hard to get a girl
 They just don't understand his world
 But love's no noun it's more a verb
 To the man with the bright red car

I said I don't know how you cope you've so much weight to bear
 A full time job some over time and your brother's full time care
 He looked at me like I was slow he shook his head and told me "No,
 Don't you see they take care of me that's how it is with family
 And I saw a man who was a king the man with the bright red car
